Brief Presentation & Panel Discussion

LGBTQI Patients: Curriculum Update and Teaching Resources

- Hear an overview of curriculum available for medical students for addressing LGBTQI health concerns.
- Discuss with panelists ways of providing opportunities for students to learn to identify, communicate with, and treat LGBTQI patients.

Panelists:

Susan Boulware, MD is a Pediatric Endocrinologist and Medical Director of Yale Gender Program treating gender questioning individuals from 3-25 years of age.

Dana Dunne, MD is an Associate Professor in Medicine and Infectious Diseases specialist. She has been involved in care of HIV patients for more than 25 years. Dr. Dunne is Director of the inpatient Internal Medicine clerkship and Associate Program Director for the Internal Medicine Residency Program.

Andrew Gotlin, MD is the Chief of Student Health and Athletic Medicine at Yale Health. He is a member of the Yale School of Medicine's Dean's Advisory Council on LGBTQ Affairs. Dr. Gotlin precepts second and third year medical students as they rotate through Yale Health learning about various topics including LGBTQ health.
